THE DAILY ADVENTURES OF PUSS IN BOOTS, JR.

By DAVID CORY.

The Wedding Guests Cross Beaver

Dam.
When Puss Junior and his three little comrades, the squirrel and the chipmunk and the muskrat, reached Beaver Dam, they lokeed around to see what had become of the old bullfrog who had swum across the brook. There he was in the water about half way down the stream, swimming away for all he was worth "Ker-chunk, ker-chunk!" he cried, as he came up to them, "Why don't you wait for a fellow? And why didn't you tell me you were going up stream?"

Puss Junior feit very sorry to think that he had really forgotten all about the old builfrog. "Well. you got here all right, didn't you?" asked the muskrat. "Now." he continued, "I'm going to knock three times on the dam to let Mr. Beaver know that we would like to cross."

After giving three loud brooks

After giving three loud knocks, Mr. Beaver looked over and said: "What's the matter? Who are you? What do you want? Where did you come from? Where are you going?"
"We'll answer the last question first," said Pure Junior with a grip. "We's the said Puss Junior with a grin. "We'd like to cross over on your beautiful great big
